1. Elected officials must make decisions that will maintain the economic prosperity that makes Northern Virginia an attractive region in which to live and work. They will also face continuing demands to pay for infrastructure needs. Balancing these pressures will be a top priority in the foreseeable future.

What policies would you advocate to grow the economic prospects of Fairfax County?

2. Adequate affordable housing remains a problem for the Northern Virginia area. Among the factors contributing to this problem are regulatory barriers, “not in my backyard” sentiments from local residents, and loss of existing affordable housing units to redevelopment pressures. What proposals would you advance to help ease the housing crunch?

What would be your recommendations for road and transit projects, both locally and in the region?

7. Northern Virginia's local governments are embracing new environmental initiatives to conserve natural resources and become more "green." Some have proposed voluntary measures or financial assistance, while others would prefer mandated actions. What actions would you support in the areas of energy efficiency?

Would you seek additional authority from the General Assembly to implement energy conservation programs? If so, please explain.

8. What are the top three issues facing Fairfax County and what will you do in office to address them?
